It's a lot of bother keeping promises when a big store like ours has to be made ready and filled with the choicest goods from the United States and Europe.

The store will be open on Monday, but the goods will not be as well arranged as we had promised; the time was too short, so we have done the best we could under the circumstances.

The departments are fairly well-filled and there will be no delay in waiting on you and filling your orders. We've arranged that part of the business better than we have the stock. The latest in cash carriers and some wide-awake clerks will look after you, but you will never be asked to buy. The goods are for your inspection, and you are welcome at all times to come in and admire, to buy if they suit you and the prices are right.

You will find the store divided into departments and you can see at a glance where the article you want is to be found—there's no mixing up of goods—hardware is with hardware and glassware with glass, not with crockery or stoves.

The second floor is principally for housefurnishing goods—novelties in these lines that will surprise you. Take elevator at rear of the store near the office.
